

Hello,

See Below my feedback to the new proposals.

Changes to the land council elections and not necessary currently only Aboriginal people that can prove their Aboriginality can enrol to vote in the elections. The government's three-part test as we all know does not work and it allows non Aboriginal people to claim to be Aboriginal and this is a problem all across Australia, there needs to be another way such as DNA testing for example.

Aboriginal land is currently managed by Aboriginal people that are local to the areas in which they are managing they are experienced, and I have proven outcomes to benefit the health country, It should not be about Aboriginal Organisations but about the Aboriginal community.

ALCT already shares its management plans with the Aboriginal community.

Regards,

David
