

To the government representatives of the Aboriginal Land Acts Review,

It is vital that the government acts in accordance with the fact that aboriginal people, as traditional custodians of this continent, have never ceded sovereignty.

Aboriginal people, as traditional custodians of these lands need to be thoroughly consulted and be allowed self determination in relation to any decision making processes, in accordance and in line with their cultural laws and practices.

You are employed to act in respectful relations as per the UN Declaration of Human Rights.

Aboriginal people know how to manage the land, which pre date colonial history and the constitutional Land Acts must be in line with this, for the maintaining of safety and health of all species and ecosystems.

Sincerely,

Kylie MacFarlane
